

Environment, Health and Safety Commitment

Tenneco Automotive has established the following Policy to guide its commitment to protecting the environment and the health and safety of employees and the public:

- environmental, health and safety management is an essential business function that can provide a competitive business advantage;
- all occupational illnesses and injuries, all environmental incidents, and pollution can and should be prevented;
- every employee is responsible and should be held accountable for preventing environmental, health and safety incidents; and,
- world class environmental, health and safety performance enhances our ability to produce high-quality automotive parts and outstanding shareholder value.

Mark P. Frissora
Chairman & CEO
Tenneco Automotive

To implement its Policy, Tenneco Automotive has established the following Environmental, Health and Safety Objectives to achieve and maintain world class performance at all operating locations:

- identifying environmental, health and safety hazards and minimizing the associated risk to employees, customers, the environment and the public;
- ensuring compliance with applicable laws and company standards;
- identifying best practices and implementing continuous improvement;
- increasing safe behaviors and decreasing at-risk behaviors through observation, feedback, data gathering and action planning;
- ensuring effective environmental, health and safety training;
- investigating all incidents to determine their root causes and developing effective corrective actions for incident prevention;
- managing change, including new manufacturing processes, products and acquisitions by identifying and eliminating - or controlling - new risks resulting from the change;
- measuring accurately environmental, health and safety performance so that appropriate decisions are made for improvement;
- auditing environmental, health and safety management systems to achieve world class environmental, health and safety performance;
- developing and retaining documentation of procedures and performance; and
- communicating the company policy, objectives and performance to employees, shareholders and the public.